Ar about seven e'clock last evening Mr. Charles Arter while sitting in his father' store was taken seriously ill, and at 12 o'clock, the last word we received concerning his condition, was that he could not possibly survive until daylight. It was reported on the streets that he had taken an overdose of morphine, but whether purposely or otherwise we could not learn. Our last information was that he was in a sleeping stupor from which every effert to

THE indications are that the ballon board the Great Republic, next Wednesday evening, will be the occasion of the season. Two hundred and fifty tickets have already been sold, and the probabilities are that the sales will exceed four hundred. The cabin of the Great Republic, over 200 feet in length, brilliantly illuminated and filled with respectable citizens, their wives and daughters, will present a festive spectacle neve before seen in Cairo. The object of the ball is to sid the Delta City Fire company one of the most efficient in the city; and we need scarcely ask our citizens to indicate their approval of the object by turning

THE Topeka (Kansas) 'Commonwealth,' referring to Miss Price's performance in that city says: "Costa opera house was crowded iast night with one of those splendld audiences which in this city do not get together oftener than once or twice in a season. Every desirable seat was taken, and it has been many months since the opera house has presented so brilliant an appearance, the throng being eminently fashionable and consequently eminently dressy. The play was the dramatized version of Wilkie Collins' well-known novel, "The New Magdalen," a highly sensational drama which is well calculated to exhibit the strong points of the company, and the principal character in which has been made a specialty by Miss Price. She gives it a very intense degree of dramatic fervor and warmth of coloring, and branging it thour-

oughly in the range of human sypathy. In the emotional scenes she rises to grand dramatic heights, never forgetting, of | for the South. course, the attributes belonging to such a peculiarly-conditioned character. Such a ombination of circumstances as that which Mercy Merrick was forced to pass through may be possible in real life, but no dramatist was ever before bold enough to bring it upon the stage.

The support accorded Miss Price was unexceptionally good. Miss Julia Hanchett's rendition of Grace Roseburry was such as to divide the applause with Miss Price. She is in every way a natural impersonation of the English lady of the novelist's creationfresh, beautiful and unaffected-the picture of innocence and purity in every movement. Miss Jamison made a very acceptable Lady Janet Roy, and never seemed to lose sight of the fact that she was "mistress of Maple-thorpe house." Mr. Meldrum gave a careful and wellstudied rendition of "Julian Gray," his characterization being a true portrayal of the firm, liberal and at time exuberant English clergymen.
